WHATS INSIDE

Since today is our last issue of the Monarch, the school having been sold, we hope you enjoy our last paper. God bless you wherever you go.

Who Cares..... 2
XX$#%X$X..... 3
Fool's Frenzy 4

Who Cares: Finally, Saint Leo has a club we can all join, meet your comrades at the commie club. Also, several students claim Saint Leo is being invaded, get the facts.

XX$#%X$X: Dan Quayle has been named president, George Bush has disappeared, will the world ever be the same. Also, I wear clown shoes, everyone is wearing clown shoes, you should wear clown shoes, find out why clown shoes are in this year.

Fool's Frenzy: It's time for another CUB celebration, this time it's for April Fools. (Those guys will do anything to have a party.)

It is in these times of great personal tragedy, when we must look back on the last 25 years of Saint Leo College, and find the good things. High on this list of accomplishments must be the outstanding Dan Quayle jokes this school has written, here are a few:

What were Dan Quayle's three hardest years?
Kindergarten.

Dan Quayle is so dumb he thinks cheerios are dougnut seeds.

What's the difference between Jane Fonda and Dan Quayle?
Jane went to Vietnam.

What do you see if you look into Dan Quayle's ear when you shine a light through the other?
A thousand point of light.
or
A for rent sign.

POINT TO PONDER

Saint Leo, the loniest frontier. These are the voyages of 1,200 brain dead students. Their seven year mission to seek out parties and new ways to waste time. To squander their parent's money like no one has ever before.

COLLEGE SOLD

Foreig n company to close school

(CPS) — Saint Leo College and all associated enterprises were sold on March 25,1989 to Kittomatta, a Japanese investment firm. The precise terms of the sale were not released, but David Dufous, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, said that the school had handled the deal with, "the same level of concern for the student body in which we handle all such matters."

Students will be expected to, "get out," according to Dufous, "or be thrown out." The exact date of eviction has not yet been determined, but Dufous assured reporters that students would have, "quite a few days to make arrangements." Asked whether he was concerned that some students might not be able to book flights in time , Dufous answered, "That's their problem. I hope that bunch of scum doesn't expect us to provide them with rides."

Kittomatta executives later indicated that they intended to make very few changes in the operation of the school. "We are going to turn it into a brothel," said Hirohota, their chairman.

The Saint Leo Police Department issued a statement indicating that this was not a problem. "We will continue to pull cars with faulty headlights, just as we've always done in the past. And we will continue molesting children as well."

Johnny Genfat, Director of Lies at Saint Leo College, said that the school had been sold for financial reasons. "With the tremendous expense we incur watering the students everyday, it was simply impossible to remain open. We couldn't afford enough luncheons for the administrators and these foul students kept expecting service. What did they want for $10,000 anyway?"

Students took the news with surprising calm. "Who cares?" said Fred, before falling on the ground and mumbling. Another student simply faded out of existence. At least one student, a member of the Sigma Epsilon Chi sorority, seemed delighted, "I've been, like, wondering about what I could do after I graduated, you know, and well, this seems like a prime opportunity for me to ply my trade. I hope Kittomatta will be hiring."

Many administrators expressed the same sentiment. "It would be nice," said Frank Stank, Director of Directing other Directors to the Restroom, "working here without all these pesty students. They always seem to ruin the events we organize. If only we could run schools without students, things would be wonderful. We could indulge ourselves even more."

Eng lish majors revolt, fight college's takeover

By Ivan Offolich

A group of masked Saint Leo College students dressed in Renaissance-style clothes staged a successful coup attempt on all the college's major administrative offices Tuesday.

The coup was led by seven English majors identifying themselves only as "Rosencrantz", "Guildenstern", "Juliet", "Macbeth", "Mark Antony", "Portia", and "Falstaff".

At a Wednesday press conference in Selby Auditorium the Shakespearean revolutionaries announced that the college would be undergoing drastic changes under their administration.

They announced the dissolution of the Division of Business Administration and the Division of Physical Education which they said were deemed as "unnecessary for a proper education."

The seven revolutionaries also announced that student housing policies would be changed to "create an atmosphere more conducive to study". These changes will include mandatory 24 hour quiet hours, and priority given for preferred residence areas to students with grade point averages of 3.25 or better.

In addition, most of the residence halls will be renamed. What the new names will be has not yet been revealed; however, Snyder Hall will retain its current name.

Also announced were changes to the Basic Studies requirements for students. Now, all students will be required to take at least 18 hours of college level (non-remedial) English classes as well as greater humanities and social science requirements.

Richard Buoye and Colleen Bens reinforce new companys position against The English Majors revolt.

A greater part of the College's budget will be used for such things as improving college theatre facilities and the offices of the college's newspaper. The exact reasons for priority being given to such things is not known, although it is rumored that the one called "Falstaff" has ties to the college's newspaper.

The press conference was interrupted when a group of business majors carrying machine guns entered the room and threatened to kill the next of the revolutionaries to speak.

The uproar was quelled ,however, when the masked pseudo-Shakespeareans quietly uncapped their Faber Castell Uniball Micro ball-point pens which were concealing stun-ray laser guns. The unconscious business majors were then removed from the campus unharmed.

At press time, the revolutionaries had not made a statement about the interruption nor had they announced what those college employees who would be losing their jobs would be doing, but "Falstaff" was heard to say something that sounded like "First, we'll kill all those who hire lawyers."

The board of trustees was unavailable for comment on the coup.

WHO CARES??

Proletariat of Saint Leo unite

Finally, a long unmet need of Saint Leo College students has been fulfilled, We are estatic to be able to announce the formation and chartering of the Saint Leo College Chapter of Socialist International.

Socialist International is an organization of men and women who believe that the world's problems may be solved through the time tested principles of socialism. Socialist International seeks to expose the greed and oppression of western capitalists. We believe this to be of utmost importance on this campus, where, many students pursue studies in business courses and other related fields without the true understanding of how their actions serve to oppress the proletariat.

Socialist International further seeks to explore the truth and meaning of Marxoid, Maoist, and Geuverist theory and how it may be practically applied in this society. We plan to show movies that document United States and other western nations imperialistic plots against the masses.

In order to further students' revolutionary ferver, we plan to take trips to the people's workers paradises of the Soviet Union, the People's Democratic Republic of Germany, as well as Albania.

We have scheduled internationally renown speakers such as Alexander Cockburn, George Kennan, Professor Michio Morishima, and Bella Abzug to enlighten the student body with the truth.

Other goals of Socialist International include the mobilizing of the religious community in support of an unilateral nuclear disarmament policy by the United States. We also hope to demonstrate at the local Tampa Federal Buildings in protest of the United State's foreign policy in Central America.

The Saint Leo College Chapter of Socialist International will meet on every Friday evening at 7 p.m. in the Duncan Lounge. There are no dues as we are financially supported by the International Directorate of the Soviet Politburo and organizations such as the Rubenstein Foundation.

Although all members are of equal status, in order to satisfy school requirements, there was a provisional executive board elected. Daniel Buksa was elected President; William Quigley was elected Vice-President; Todd Trumpore was elected Secretary; and Richard Dery, Treasurer.

Before each meeting is called to order, all present will rise to sing the Internationale, the international theme song of the people's world wide Socialist movement. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

In a related issue, a small group of vociferous students protested the administrations acceptance of Socialist International on campus. Led by Ms. Melody Shanaberger, they distributed leaflets which contained their grievances. In protesting the organization, Ms. Shanaberger exclaimed, "they are just a bunch of bloody commies."

Death to Death Poems

By Jerry Atryx

"Angry Death Poetry," a major backwoods movement, has, of late, received a great deal of praise from a variety of sundry institutions. Yet, despite its acceptance, few people have delved deeply into the "Angry Death" phenomena and fewer still have grasped the aesthetic theory which lies behind it.

Study the poem below paying careful attention to the jumble of incoherent imagery and total lack of meter:

Misery
I got it
Laundry piled in obsidian pits
Flame belches from my smoke
Death—
I need you
Come like an armadillo in the night
Dead spiders spin ghostly webs
"No," I cry.
"My parents are meanies:
Two crows with sharp metal fangs that drip blood."
I hate laundry
The machine gapes like a hungry pig's maw
I flee from it and take my bleach with me
The fumes, the fumes — lilac in a dumpster
I fade - fade - fade
Does anyone feel sorry for me yet?
If not, let me tell you:
I got problems buddy.

— DeJargo

The meaning here should be clear: A bored, as yet un-potentialized failed writer, has strung together a series of self-indulgent mumbo-jumbo in very lazy, un-practiced verse so as to bore the reader into sympathizing with a suicidal feeling. A clever ploy, but one already explored with little success during the 1960's.

The discerning reader may still miss the point of the "Death Verse" or "Dead Meter" school of poetry. This is because there's nothing to discern in the poetry itself. However, a few comments from the poets, themselves, may clarify matters.

According to Eddie Dimple, the style was developed, "when we all took elemetary verse writing. That course taught us everything we know."

Vampyra, another leader in the school, said the group was founded upon the principle that, "Ignorance makes good poetry. We all avoid the real world because it might taint us with some genuine humanity. Most of us follow the Democrtatic Party for the same reason."

"Yes," said Mark Marx, "withdrawal from reality. That's what we're all about. I think. No. I just changed my mind. I don't know. I used to know, but I forgot."

In the end, all agreed upon the one over-arching aesthetic principle that governs death poetry. "We write it because it's easy," they said. That's some principle.

Mariott overthrown

By Ray DeOestayshin

In light of an ever growing distaste for the food at McDonald cafeteria, the faculty, administration, and students have banned together to overthrow the Marriott Catering Service at Saint Leo College.

It seems to be a general consensus that the quality of food is going down. What can we do about this? One student suggested picketing the cafeteria with signs that say "NO MORE FRENCH ONION SURPRISE" and "YOU CAN'T FOOL US! WE KNOW IT'S DOG FOOD!" Another student said that the only improvement in this year's meal program has been the ridiculous names that Marriott has invented to call their disgusting meals.

In fact, did you read in the National Enquirer last week about the girl who gave birth to Big Foot? That girl went to Saint Leo and ate the food here for a whole semester during the crucial months of her pregnancy! She must have eaten the Horseburgers for lunch. I heard that Big Foots love to eat horses.

HEY GUESS WHAT??? APRIL FOOL!!! I'm only kidding. The food isn't really that bad. Let's admit that the food in the cafeteria is the best food around. It is the best food that I have had next to my mom's cooking. I am also sure that it is the best stuff you have ever eaten too . . . right?

Students having visit s of the weirdest kind

By Justin Kase

Monarch Staff Writer

"It rose above Lake Jovita, then hovered above me for 20 seconds. I wanted to run, but it held me. A purple light bathed me as the theme from Jeopardy boomed from the ship. It was round, with hundreds of spikes sticking out, and it looked like a pink pin cushion. I felt something sucking me up and suddenly my feet weren't touching the ground. I tried to scream, but couldn't. The ship started to move. I was about 40 feet above the ground. I have to admit it was stimulating. Then I saw IT: a green and orange spotted creature looking down at me from the pin cushion.

It was awful. It looked like the color of the food you see in McDonalds except the creature looked better. Suddenly I was on the ground again and the ship was rising above the flouresent Lake Jovita and out of sight."

This incredible quote came from a student currently attending Saint Leo College. It might be hard for people to believe, but it has been witnessed by several people, mostly those who were pledging (Being Hazed). As I began to investigate this story I soon learned that these people had had several visits of the weirdest kind. One student even claims that he had a conversation with one of the aliens:

LILY: (We've changed the names to protect the innocent) From what planet are you?
ALIEN: K-Mart, the savings place.
LILY: No. What P-L-A-N-E-T are you from?
ALIEN: Space, the final frontier, these are the voyages of the starship Enterprise.
LILY: I don't think you understand, why are you here?
ALIEN: Take me to your leader.
LILY: George Bush?
ALIEN: No, Donald Trump.
LILY: Why are you here?
ALIEN: Isn't this New York City?
LILY: No, this is Dade City.
ALIEN: Oops.

It seems the green and orange spotted creatures assumed they could infiltrate New York without being noticed (they are more normal looking than most people in the big apple). The last this reporter has heard of these creatures, some of the local males were chasing the aliens with their trucks and force feeding them stale beer from Ralph's.

The administration, meanwhile, denies not being able to deny that there are such beings visiting Saint Leo. "We might set up a committee to meet in secret in order to not release our report to the students."

Most students still do not believe that any visitors are coming to Saint Leo. Of course, most students don't believe they are in college, but are here to get an "awesome" tan.
